

SLICEMAN WON'T TAKE MEDAL HE DOESN'T DESERVE

Bingham Is Astounded By Rejection of Honor Another Earned.

It's a dull morning these days when something spectacular doesn't happen at No. 200 Mulberry street. Yesterday Gen. Bingham had an old veteran of the department, Captain James Reynolds, booted down the front steps for daring to approach him with a legal summons.

Today the Commissioner brought to Headquarters all the honor men of the last three months, so that he might deliver to them one of his Nine-Gods-of-War talks on the subject of courage and fidelity.

During July, August and September forty-one men of the force were decorated or commended by the Board of Honor for acts of special courage or merit. The list included one lieutenant and two sergeants. The other thirty-eight were ordinary patrolmen, of whom about half belonged to the Traffic Squad.

At 10:30 o'clock forty-one men in uniform were lined up in front of the horseshoe in the trial room, looking very unhappy, uncomfortable and embarrassed as they waited for the Commissioner to come out of the wings and give his speech into their red, perspiring faces.

When it finally began, the ceremony was marked by two significant things: The Commissioner found a policeman who refused to take praise from another man's lips, and the Commissioner himself intimated that he might not be at the head of the force so very much longer.

When he came striding in, flanked by a firing wedge of clerks and functionaries, the forty-one cops came to "attention." So he halted right there and gave them a five-minute talk on the desirability of saluting with the snappy alertness of a regular soldier. From a list, he called out the name of the honor man in turn. As each stepped forward, Bingham read off the record of his act and put the question, "Is this true?"

"Yes, sir," the man would say. "Good, very good," the Commissioner would say, and then he'd shake hands with the man, to a sergeant and a patrolman who had saved ten lives at a Chrysie street fire by forming a human bridge across a ten-foot gap. He was particularly enthusiastic in his remarks.

Presently he came to the name of Joseph M. Garvey, a patrolman of the Eldridge street station, who was rewarded with having saved a drowning woman from under the wings of an East River ferry-boat at its own great peril. Following the formula, Gen. Bingham asked him, "Is this true?"

"No, sir," he answered. Garvey, a tall, solidly built thirty-five year old man, almost fell out of his chair. "What do you mean, sir?"

"I mean just this," said Garvey. "I won't stand another man's credit. I didn't make that rescue. I don't know how my name got on the roll for it. Either they got my shield number by mistake or another man of my name made the rescue."

When the last man had been questioned, hand-shaken and complimented by the Commissioner, he ordered this review because of something that happened last year. I was put in a very nasty hole through the fact that a man got on the honor rolls who had no business there. After he had been given honorable mention and a medal I found he was an impostor, taking credit for things he had not done. That shall never happen again if I can help it."

"I want you to scatter the news among your fellows that no man is to be tolerated, but that every man who acquires himself with credit in an emergency will be given proper recognition for it. I would like to meet every man on the force personally. The only way that can be done is for every man to be so discharge his duties that he will be sent here as you have been sent."

Hints at Retirement. Then the Commissioner reached the point where he rather hinted, so some of the bystanders thought, at his own retirement.

"I am glad to have shaken the hands of so many brave men," he said. "I am particularly pleased that two of your number should be men I know personally, by reason of the fact that they are attached to my own staff. "These men are in a hard position because of their positions, but when I am gone I want the whole department to know that those two were in every way worthy of their places and that they served in possibly disagreeable positions through a sense of duty."

Garvey, who wouldn't stand another's credit, has been a policeman twelve years. His record is absolutely clean. He lives at No. 720 Fifty-first street, Brooklyn, where he has a wife and three children.

The following are the honor men who appeared before the Commissioner: Joseph O'Sullivan, Third Sub-Precinct; James Ganssman, Third Sub-Precinct; Joseph E. Bracken, Third Precinct; Joseph Behnk, Fifth-ninth Precinct; John T. Carlson, Fifth-ninth Precinct; Thos. O'Loughlin, Seventeenth Precinct; Thomas Connor, Fifteenth Precinct; Joseph L. Madhaff, Third Sub-Precinct; John Campbell, Seventy-ninth Sub-Precinct; Gustave Bruns, Sixteenth Precinct; Edward McCormack, Sixteenth Precinct; Charles A. Gehhardt, C. O. Squad; Sergt. John M. Hackett, Twelfth Precinct; Patrick McManus, Twelfth Precinct; John McKen, Twelfth Precinct; Nathan Whitman, Twelfth Precinct; William Walsh, Twenty-eighth Precinct; James J. Phelan, Second Precinct; Patrick Kane, Fifteenth Precinct; Joseph M. Garvey, Twelfth Precinct; Michael J. Conroy, Third Precinct; Ernest Von Bartheld, Forty-first Precinct; Sergt. John Scully, Thirty-first Precinct; John J. Nolan, Seventy-first Precinct; Elmer Dunlap, Fifty-fourth Precinct; John F. Murphy, Sixteenth Precinct; Joseph L. Murry, Second Precinct; Martin F. McDonough, Third Precinct; Thomas J. Hogan, Eighth Precinct; Thomas J. Fitzpatrick, First Precinct; Edward Bohmke, Seventy-first Precinct; August Scheiber, Sixtieth Precinct; Thomas P. Doherty, Sixtieth Precinct; Benjamin Merritt, Third Sub-Precinct; John J. Delaney, Twenty-ninth Precinct; Thomas A. Ward, Ninth Precinct; Sergt. William O. Wettlaufer, Forty-second Sub-Precinct.
